

Contributors to this issue

Olivier Bazin is Communications Manager for the National Institute for Health Research Clinical Research Network, and is studying for a Master of Studies in Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy at the University of Oxford.

Daniel Dolley is the holder of a DPhil in Anthropology from the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, University of Oxford

Kate Nialla Fayers-Kerr is a Wiener-Anspach Post-Doctoral Research Fellow, Laboratoire d'Anthropologie des Mondes Contemporains, Université Libre de Bruxelles.

Barbara Gerke is a Research Associate of the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, University of Oxford. Her DFG-funded post-doctoral project on Tibetan pharmacological detoxification methods was based at the Humboldt University, Berlin (2011-2015).

Hannah M. Graff is Senior Policy Researcher at the UK Health Forum and a doctoral student in Public Health at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

Rachel Hall-Clifford is Assistant Professor of Anthropology and Public Health at Agnes Scott College in Georgia, and In-Country Director of the National Association for the Practice of Anthropology Field School in Guatemala.

Elisabeth Hsu is Professor of Anthropology in the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, University of Oxford. She was co-founder and formerly course director of its two master's programmes in medical anthropology.

Merle Keck is currently working as a neurologist in the Neurology Department of the Humboldt University, Berlin, and in a private outpatient clinic with a focus on Turkish migrants with psychiatric complaints.

Amy McLennan is an Early Career Teaching and Research Fellow in Medical Anthropology at the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, University of Oxford.

Katherine J. Morris is a Fellow in Philosophy of Mansfield College, University of Oxford.

Caroline Potter is a Research Officer, Health Services Research Unit, Nuffield Department of Population Health, University of Oxford

Stanley Ulijaszek is Professor of Human Ecology in the Institute of Social and Cultural Anthropology, University of Oxford.